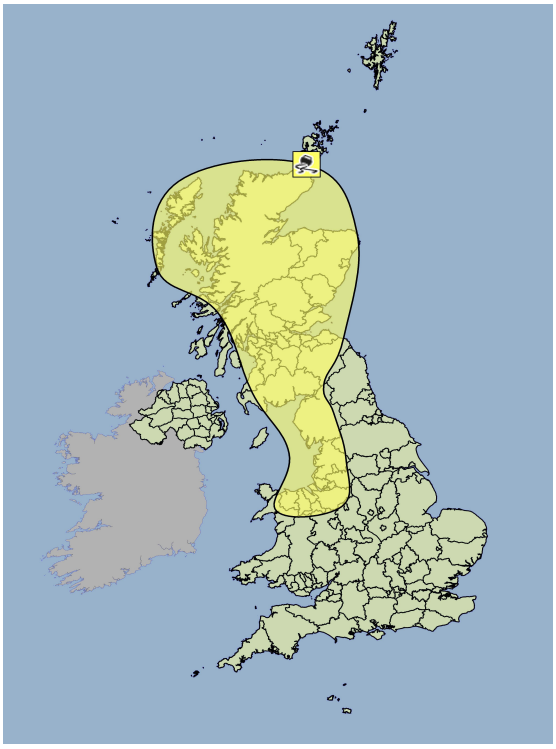
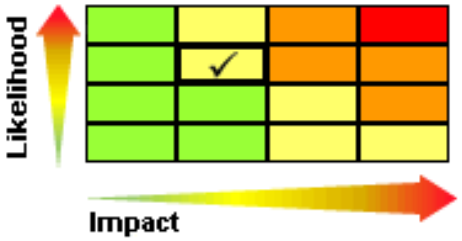
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Light winds and clearing skies will allow temperatures to fall away this evening and overnight. With surfaces damp from showers or seepage from saturated ground, icy stretches are likely to develop on untreated surfaces. As well as this, some further showers are likely to spread across the west of the area, with these possibly washing away any treatment that has been put on roads, increasing the risk of icy stretches.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 19:00 on Sat, 04th Jan 2014 until 10:00 on Sun, 05th Jan 2014

As skies clear this evening and overnight, road surface temperatures will fall below freezing. This will allow some icy stretches to develop on untreated surfaces, or where treatment is washed off by showers.

The public should be aware of the potential for the risk of localised disruption to transport.
